Interview Reimbursement Services: end on a high note with your candidates. And make your finance team's day, too!

business challenges

Every candidate interaction is critical when competing for top talent, and delays in reimbursements and complicated processes can turn off potential employees in a snap. Meanwhile, your recruiting and accounts payable teams are dealing with a major-league time commitment as they touch thousands of individual receipts every year.

- Reimbursing candidate can take a long time and be a frustrating process.
- Processing individual candidate expenses is tedious and wildly time consuming.
- It's nearly impossible to ensure every reimbursement follows policy.

how this affects you

Candidates having a poor reimbursement experience are left with a negative impression of your company.

Each candidate must be set up in your accounting system, and a check must be cut, which means a significant amount of time for your finance team.

Since it's hard to know if every reimbursement is being handled according to approved policy, you could be overpaying on reimbursements.

what if you could...?

Deliver a high-touch experience without the high-touch overhead?

Increase consistency in your process and adherence to policy?

Receive consolidated invoicing with detailed reporting?

if...

Your candidates have to follow complicated processes to submit expenses or wait extended periods of time to receive reimbursement

Your recruiting and accounts payable teams are spending excessive amounts of time processing these requests

You're not sure if your policies are being applied consistently or correctly then...

You need to simplify your reimbursement process both for your candidates as well as for your recruiting and accounts payable teams (and leave a flawless impression with potential employees along the way).

what's in it for you

Candidates who see your company as responsive, tech savvy and caring

A whole bunch of freed-up time for your recruiting and accounts payable teams

Reduced overpayments on reimbursements thanks to a closer adherence to policy

what it is
